Hi Celia,

We're finally at the seaside. It's a lovely cottage (1), which has a view of the sea. There's an open fire in the living room (2), which isn't lit at the moment, and a magnificent photo on the wall of some brave fishermen (3), who are all laughing, in a very small boat at sea. We've been here since lunchtime. Timmy (4), who was very excited this morning, was sick unfortunately during the journey, but he was feeling better by the time we arrived.

The drive (5), which took us through some beautiful scenery, took a little longer than I hoped. There was a tractor in front of us for the last half hour. Benji, (6), who isn't sick fortunately, is very excited, as you can imagine. If he jumps on my laptop (7), which is on the sofa, he's in trouble, though. He's changed, hasn't he? How are things going with work? It won't be long before you can join us will it? At that moment, I'll be thinking of you.

Hi Charles,

I've just had a late working lunch (8), which was delicious, with my boss (9), whose phone keeps ringing constantly. He was sitting opposite me (10), which was a bit uncomfortable, asking me questions about the computer project. I have to work twice as hard as usual, because my colleague Phillip (11), who I'm working with on a new project, is in hospital for a minor operation. The hospital (12), which has fantastic doctors and nurses, is very close so I'll visit him later. I'll be able to drive down after work tomorrow evening. By the time I get there tomorrow, you'll have cooked me a delicious dinner I hope!
